

The APPG Basketball is holding an Inquiry into:

the ability of Basketball to make a difference to the social challenges affecting young people, particularly in the UK's inner cities

Inquiry Terms of Reference

1. To inquire into Basketball (in the widest sense) and, in particular:
  1. its interest to disadvantaged young people, particularly in UK inner cities, (utilising available participation data from Sport England; DCMS; and other organisations in the sport);
  2. current Basketball-related programmes that are addressing inner city social challenges and/or promoting all aspects of a healthy lifestyle and the importance of education;
  3. lessons learned and outcomes from those programmes, and the ability to replicate those outcomes in other locations;
  4. origins and sustainability of funding, where funding exists for current programmes; and
  5. examples from other countries and/or jurisdictions.
2. To make recommendations as follows:
  1. How such Basketball-related programmes could be better and more effectively delivered;
  2. How various government entities might collaborate to provide funding in an efficient and cost effective manner, and sustainably, to use Basketball as a method of engagement and change; and
  3. How to bring examples of best practice to the widest audience of partners, potential funders, decision makers, media, etc.

Further description of the Inquiry

1. The wider aims of the Inquiry are to:
  1. highlight the current evidence and the potential of Basketball's ability to rehabilitate disaffected youth, both keeping them off the streets and providing them with life changing opportunities;
  2. highlight that Basketball is increasingly being used as an activity to convey a range of positive health and education-related messages to young people;
  3. increase the profile of Basketball's achievements at grassroots' level with MPs and Peers;
  4. achieve greater recognition of the good work within Basketball-related programmes;
  5. encourage funding from widespread sources for effective Basketball-related programmes; and
  6. improve the standing of Basketball within the Government, particularly at national level, and in the private and third sectors.

2. The process for the Inquiry is as follows:

1. Produce “Call for Evidence”.
2. Agree distribution list for “Call for Evidence”.
3. Issue “Call for Evidence” by e-mail to agreed distribution list.
4. Receive submissions from organisers of relevant Basketball-related programmes.
